WILLIAM GILL, VICTIM OF ATTACK

Woman and Man Are Held by Police in Strange Case of Assault.

VICTIM IS UNCONSCIOUS

When William Gill, a woman attached to Teller 8, Fort Hill square, unconscious and lying from a fractured skull at the City Hospital, Miss Mary Duffy, twenty-five years old of No. 70 Northfield street, and Thomas H. Jackson, an ex-druggist, of No. 49 Blue Hill avenue, are under arrest, waiting an investigation by the police into a mysterious attack that was made upon Gill late last night at the entrance to the Olympia Hotel in Washington street.

As Gill was leaving the hotel in company with Miss Duffy and Miss Frances Martin of No. 52 Northfield street, a man about twenty-five years old, clean shaven and wearing a light coat and dark derby hat, Miss Duffy says, stepped up and beat Gill a vicious blow upon the head, presumably with a club.

Went Out for a Walk.

Gill, feeling under the blow, staggered down the street a short distance and returned to the hotel. The assailant, who was a white man, about thirty years old, with light hair, was seen by Miss Duffy. She says that the man was wearing a light coat and dark derby hat, and that he was seen by her and Miss Duffy as they were walking down the street.

Investigation by the police today showed that Gill was last evening at the home of a relative at No. 1 Bellin street, where he was seen by Miss Duffy. She says that the man was seen by her and Miss Duffy as they were walking down the street.

Death Blow with Club.

Jackson and Gill had fought three or four times many years ago and were fast friends. Jackson consented to go along with the party and the four went to the Olympia Hotel. It was 9 o'clock, Miss Duffy says, when they arrived. They stayed less than five minutes in the hotel and then they went out for a walk.

Miss Duffy says that the man was seen by her and Miss Duffy as they were walking down the street. She says that the man was wearing a light coat and dark derby hat, and that he was seen by her and Miss Duffy as they were walking down the street.

Robbery the Motive?

William Gill is forty-nine years of age and has an excellent record. He was a successful business man and was well known in the community. He was a member of the City Hospital and was well known in the community.

Senator Penrose is now improving. He has been in the hospital for some time and is now recovering from his illness. He is expected to be discharged soon.

MAY PITTSERS IN BIG LEAGUE HAVE HOODOOS

Many of the star pitchers in the American League have cities in the tropics which they regard as their lucky charms. The twisters always like to drop the hoodoo.

Take Addie Joss for instance. Addie Joss is standing in the Cleveland team to occupy a spot on the bench when the team was playing in Philadelphia. Addie Joss, however, was good for nothing against them. Either the Josses fall to the ground behind Addie or the Josses were against them.
